Thomas Brown is a first year Graduate student at NYU. He is from a small town in rural South Carolina and he does not know anybody.

When Thomas started attending class, he found it hard to make friends with his other classmates who have similar interests and did not know anybody else from home at NYU.

Thomas feels very overwhelmed by his work throughout the first month of school and does not want to attend school anymore along with not being able to make friends

Thomas gets the courage to ask somebody in his class for some help, but they do not know the material super well either

Caroline heard about this app called the ClubFinder app from one of her friends in undergrad. She recommended to Thomas that he should download the app so they can both find a group of classmates to study with

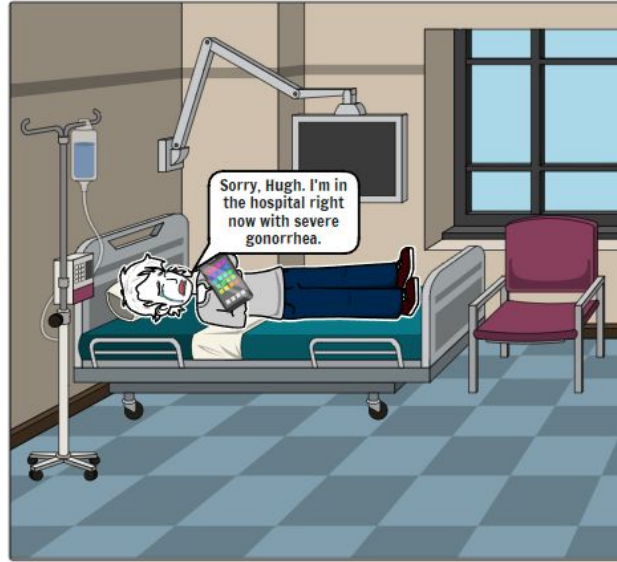

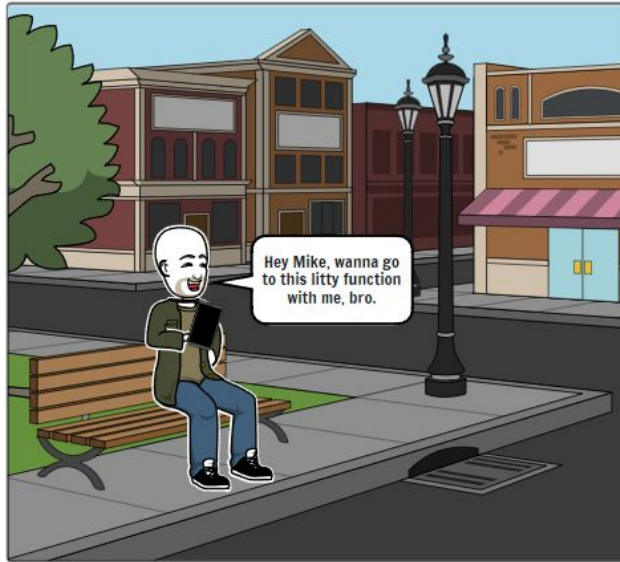

Now, Thomas has found a sturdy group of friends in his classes to study. Along with all of the amazing features of the app, he has also found out that it can help him make friends with people who have similar interests to him. Now that Thomas has all of these, he believes he is in the best position to succeed in school

Hugh has a huge night planned, but his buddy Mike is in the ICU because he messed around with the wrong lady last night.

Hugh walks the beach forlorn, when he gets an ad on his phone for our app. He decides to use it and finds someone interested in going to the function with him.

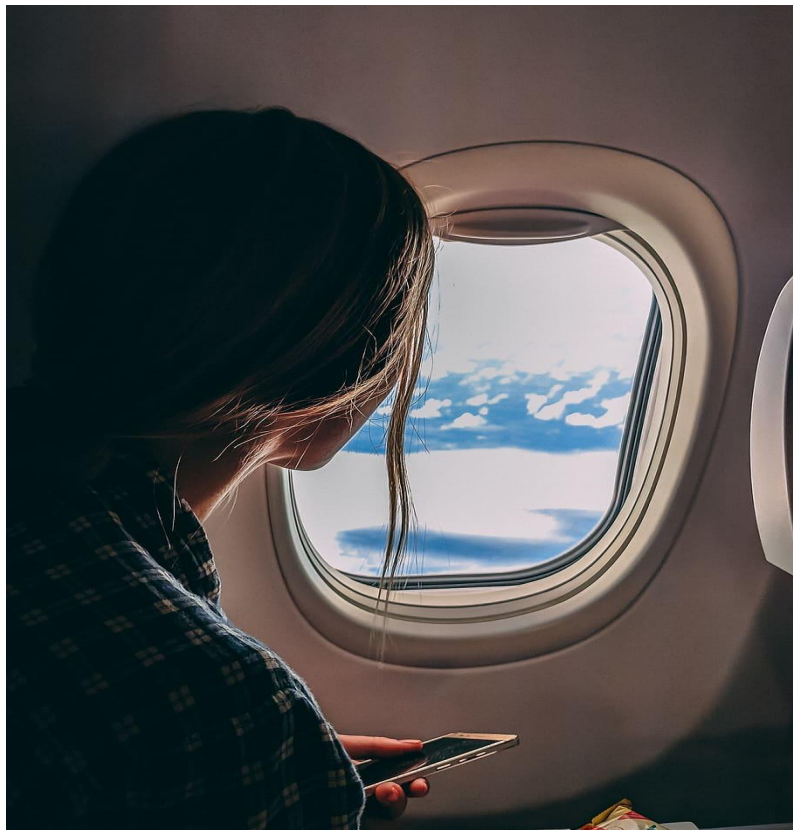

Hugh has a great night at the function, thanks to our app.

Emily in Paris

By: Cumauri Boyd

Emily is excited for her trip to go study abroad in France. She is can't wait to see Paris but she is a little nervous because she doesn't know a lot of people in the study abroad program.

As Emily and her peers in the study abroad program arrive in France, they have some free time so they end up exploring the city. But unfortunately, Emily ended up getting separated from the group and got lost.

Emily goes around looking for anyone willing to help her explore the city. At first she couldn't find anyone that understood her, but then a man shows up who saw she was lost and tells her about this app called ClubFinder that could help her find other people that are like her, that are lost in the city

She downloaded the app on her phone and not long after she was able to find a group of college kids just like her trying to find their way through the city.

She asked them to meet her at the Eiffel Tower. At first, she was nervous because she's kind of shy when meeting new people but when she met these four people they really hit it off

Fortunately, they had a lot in common and they all were from a study abroad program in different universities. So, during their entire trip there the five of them stayed really close and became best of friends. They even got to know more people as they went on. And they all had a great time together!
